Can the South be Pacified?

This is the great question which the new administration evidently intends to undertake to solve. We have the evidence of this in the inaugural of President Hayes, the purpose to put in the Cabinet some Southern men who will command the confidence of his section, and in various outpourings from Washington. By assigning to this matter the first place in its efforts, the new administration is only showing a due appreciation of the necessities of the country, and in every judicious attempt in the direction of the solution of the problem, it will have the approval of the people at large.

The undertaking will not be without serious difficulties. There are at the North and in the South, in both political parties, men who do not care for peace and harmony, because such a state of things would place them in the background. Their occupation would be gone. And the sore which has been festering almost since the foundation of the government, and which produced the rebellion, cannot reasonably be expected to be healed in a day or a year, even when an honest attempt is made to cure it, and the symptoms are favorable. The process must be comparatively slow. Failures and disappointments in some degree are almost inevitable.

But there are reasons why a good hope may be entertained that the end which is so much to be desired shall gradually be reached. The country is tired of agitation over the immediate issues of the day. The closeness of the Presidential election in several of the Southern States has led to investigations which have revealed to the public at large the wretched state of things in that region. And the nation has been imperiled by the contest which ensued. Good and wise men a week ago were holding their breath, because they did not know how soon anarchy or civil war might ensue. It is not enough to say that of such a state of things the country is tired. It demands that if possible it shall be brought to a close. The closeness of the vote for President also has convinced the more thoughtful men of either party that the surest way to political death is to follow a narrow partisan or sectional course.

And the conduct of some of the Southern leaders in the recent Presidential campaign has been such as to win for them a kindly feeling from their former political adversaries at the North. They held the balance of power. Had the solid South thrown its influence on the side of the extremists in the House of Representatives, that faction must have succeeded in producing a state of things so deplorable that every good citizen must shudder at the thought of it. The conduct of these Southern men, Republicans are not disposed to forget. The new administration could not afford to forego an honest effort to pacify the South even if it would, because the circumstances under which it enters upon its work are such that it must be impotent unless it can command the support of more than its own party adherents. It must have the confidence of the country at large or else it will become an object of pity and contempt. This we think is well for to the disposition which we believe to exist to add a necessity also to rise to the fulfillment of the wants of the occasion.

Will the South respond to the pacific overture now made to it? After all, success is contingent upon the disposition shown in that quarter. If past prejudices still continue to operate so as to cause the Southern leaders to reject a friendly hand which is held out to them and is able to help them, then with them rests the responsibility. And if hereafter they suffer from political and race troubles the fault is their own. They then will have made their own beds and must lie upon them. But we think that they are prepared to bury the past. Local interests to them are far more than those of party. If they have voted and thrown their influence in favor of one of the political parties of the country, it was mainly because they expected in this way most successfully to accomplish the ends which are most dear to the section which they represent. Now that they see that there is another and a better way by which to attain their object they will be apt to take it.

But there is a danger which ought to be carefully avoided. Concessions cannot be all in one direction. The Administration will make a mistake if it allows any race or part of the people at the South to be oppressed in order to appease any other race or part of the people. The pacification needed must extend to all classes. Unless this is true of it, the quiet which ensues will be only temporary, and by and by the old evils will reappear. The Administration is doing well in its evident readiness to bury the bloody shirt; but some one has very properly added that that is expected of the Southern leaders that they will attend the funeral.

TOUGHENED GLASS.

Success in the manufacture of the French improvement in Brooklyn—How it is done.

From the N. Y. Evening Post.

The mode of toughening glass so as to render it comparatively difficult to break for that is really the proper way of characterizing the invention is in full operation at the La Bastie Glass Works in Brooklyn, situated on Van Brunt and Delevan streets. The method is a French discovery, and the works are carried on under the superintendence of Mr. La Bastie, a countryman of La Bastie, the inventor. In a spacious building with a

PERSONS AND THINGS.

PARIS dressmakers send out dolls to their patrons in fac simile costumes of what they wear for sale.

"We're in a pickle now," said a man in a crowd. "A regular jam," said another. "Heaven preserve us," said an old lady.

A WOMAN in Detroit tried to kill herself, and the reason she gave was that she "got mad at the world" because it gave her nothing to eat.

PROBABILITIES: "When you see a man going home at two o'clock in the morning and you know his wife is waiting for him, it is likely to be stormy."

The two hottest days ever known in Australia were the 15th and 16th of January, when the thermometer registered 105 degrees in the shade in Melbourne.

The boy who shot down a hot poker wanted to say something when the subject of base burners was under consideration, but his father choked him off.

THE average annual production of kid gloves in France is two and a half million dozen pairs, three-fourths of which are exported. Ninety thousand operatives are employed in their manufacture.

More than half of the subscribers to the Atlanta cotton factory have never paid a cent of their subscriptions. They are probably under the delusion that they are a newspaper they subscribed for.

Too Cautious—A country paper, in an obituary notice of a subscriber's son, says: He was an uncommon smart boy. He had a little too much curiosity, perhaps, or he wouldn't have peeped into the muzzle of his father's shotgun.

MR. BRUTE HARKER is said to have received about a dollar a word for what he wrote during his year's engagement with Osgood, but this is something of an exaggeration. A Boston writer says that his "Two Men of Sandy Bar" has brought him $5,000.

Forty-six savings banks in Connecticut have single deposits of more than $5,000, twenty-four of more than $10,000, four more than $20,000, and one has a single deposit of $35,000. The State law does not restrict the amount except to limit the amount deposited in one year to $1,000.

A MINISTER was telling a young girl who was about to become a bride, that she must remember that the man and wife are one. "Lord," said she, "if you are under my father and mother's wing they did not know how soon anarchy or civil war might ensue. It is not enough to say that of such a state of things the country is tired. It demands that if possible it shall be brought to a close. The closeness of the vote for President also has convinced the more thoughtful men of either party that the surest way to political death is to follow a narrow partisan or sectional course."

The Presidential family will consist of President and Mrs. Hayes and three children: Webb C., aged 19; Fannie, aged 8, and Scott Russell, aged 6. The two oldest of the four sons of President Hayes are away from home, one of them attending the Cambridge Law School, and the other is a member of the junior class of Cornell University.

THE analysis of the vote for President shows that the States which voted for Governor Hayes have 143 Representatives and 42 Senators in Congress, while those who voted for Mr. Tilden have 150 Representatives and 34 Senators. The Hayes Electors represented 4,294,130 votes, and the Tilden Electors 4,131,332. Outside of the States composing the late Confederacy, Governor Hayes majority was about a quarter of a million.

It is related that a despatch announcing the completion of the Electoral count was handed to the conductor of the train bearing Governor Hayes to Washington at one of the stations. The conductor at once took the despatch to the room of President Hayes, knocked until he was answered, and then read the news. It was, however, no response he read it again in louder tones, when the President-elect said: "I hear you; don't wake up my body in the car. Good night."

A CURIOUS case recently came before a court in Providence, R. I. A man bought an old safe and left it with a blacksmith to sell, who, on opening it, found a roll of bills to the amount of $100 contained in a crack in the lining. Diligent inquiry failed to disclose any clue to the ownership of the money, and the question now is, does it belong to the owner of the safe, or the blacksmith by right of discovery?

WILLIAM M. TWEED.

Reported Negotiations for His Release.

The Newark Daily Advertiser publishes a letter from a correspondent in New York containing the following statements:

"Arrangements are made for the release of Tweed from Ludlow Street Jail and for his departure to Europe, on the basis of a prosecution against him, on the basis of an assignment of what he has to go into effect in a few days. It is understood that the 'Boss' will then go to England and join his son. To this settlement all official parties seem agreed—also Mr. O'Connor, to whom Tweed has written a letter, which I have read, in which he throws himself entirely on the mercy of those he has wronged, and agrees to be governed wholly in the premises by whatever Mr. O'Connor and associates may dictate.
